

How Will You Remember?

From Vimy to Juno encourages its audience to make remembrance an active experience. As we lose the men and women who were eyewitnesses to these nation-shaping events, it's important to ask ourselves: "How we do remember something we have no memory of?"

We want to know what remembrance means to you. In the two minutes of silence between the playing of the Last Post and the Reveille/Rouse, who or what do you remember?

Why is remembrance still important and still relevant?

How do you pay tribute to the legacy of those who came before us?

Use a postcard to share your thoughts.

STUDENTS:

Select one of the prompts below to help you fill out your postcards. Consider what you have seen and learned while exploring the From Vimy to Juno exhibit and completing the activities.

From this exhibit, I will share...

I was surprised by...

I was most moved by... because...

I wonder if...

I will build a more peaceful world by...

The saddest thing I saw was... because...

We need to remember because...

This made me think...

*Remember today.
Remember always.*
