

Panel 14

UNDERSTANDING ORCAS: THE SCIENTIFIC METHOD

Scientists study orca behaviour in the wild—but you can't study everything when you're dealing with a living animal who can swim more than 30 kilometres an hour.

In labs and museums, scientists examine orca bodies, bones, tissues and DNA to learn the secrets of their anatomy, diet, lifestyle and history.